

David Horigan
Discovery Counsel and Legal Education Director
Relativity

David Horigan is Relativity's discovery counsel and legal education director, where he leads the company's legal and industry education and analyst relations programs and serves as liaison to legal associations. An attorney, award-winning journalist, law school guest lecturer, and former e-discovery industry analyst, David has served as counsel at the Entertainment Software Association, reporter and assistant editor at The National Law Journal, and analyst and counsel at 451 Research.

His articles have appeared also in The American Lawyer, Corporate Counsel, The New York Law Journal, Texas Lawyer, The Washington Examiner, and others, and he has been quoted by The Wall Street Journal, American Public Media's Marketplace, TechRepublic, and publications of the law schools of Yale, Northwestern, Emory, and others.

A contributor to ALM's Legaltech News for the past 20 years, he founded LTN's long-running Technology on Trial column after seeing the legal technology challenges faced by lawyers as he and LTN editor-in-chief Monica Bay reported from the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001.

David serves on the Global Advisory Board of the Association of Certified E-Discovery Specialists (ACEDS), the Planning Committee and Faculty of the University of Florida Law E-Discovery Conference, and the Advisory Board of the MIT Computational Law Report at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he is co-host of the law.MIT.edu podcast.

David's professional awards include First Runner-Up for Best Legal Analysis in the 2019 LexBlog Excellence Awards and the 2016 Best Vendor Magazine Article Award from the International Legal Technology Association (ILTA). He started the Data Discovery Year in Review in 2015, and he has served as the moderator of the Relativity Fest Judicial Panel since its inception in 2014. He holds a juris doctor from the University of Florida and a certificate in international law from Universiteit Leiden in The Netherlands. He is licensed to practice law in Washington, D.C.