

Maryam Hatcher, Esq. (Washington, D.C.) is an experienced regulatory attorney and litigator with expertise in sustainability and environmental law. She began her career in nationally ranked environmental legal practices before moving to senior in-house positions, including her current role as senior counsel, sustainability at Mars, Inc. She regularly presents on sustainability and environmental law issues and has published several articles and a book chapter on related topics. Her pro bono practice includes volunteering with the DC Bar's Attorney-Client Arbitration Board (ACAB), where she has served as an arbitrator since 2019. She joined ACAB's board in 2021 and was appointed as board chair in June 2024 by the DC Bar's Board of Governors. Her achievements include recognition as a National Bar Association 40-Under-40 awardee and selection as a Rising Star in Environmental Litigation by Washington, DC, Super Lawyers. She is an honors graduate of Howard University School of Law, where she served as editor-in-chief of the Howard Law Journal. She lives in Washington, D.C., with her husband and son.